BARNABAS BLUE

Thanks to Ruth our computer Guru , she has fixed the printer problem concerning Barnabas Blue. Barnabas will not appear from the printer archives any more. He has been exiled to another planet and we hope he will never appear again.

Where did he come from in the first place? Well one of our members had secretly told me that she only hit the print button once and every since then Barnabas has shown up every time the printer was turned on. How did he get stuck in the printer? It's one of those outer space things. So all of you that looked forward to seeing Barnabas you can now lay him to rest.

Genealogy without documentation is Mythology

Jabber from Janice

I learned something new to me today in my genealogy class from my exceptional instructor, Marcia Holstrom. It is called "The Five Themes of Geography", created by the National Council for Geographic Education and the Association of American Geographers in 1985. http://geography.about.com/od/teachgeography/Teach_Geography.htm (Choose "Five Themes of Geography") Using the themes consisting of location, place, human-environment interaction, movement and region, gives genealogists techniques to understand research using maps. Using each of these themes, we can look at maps with a new set of eyes.

Some useful map websites:

<http://lcweb2.loc.gov/ammem/gmdhtml/gmdhome.html> There are many maps but not all are digitized. Some will need to be ordered through the Library of Congress. It is fascinating to search and find a map of your area of research.

<http://www.lib.utexas.edu/maps/> This is from the University of Texas at Austin. Search through the amazing online maps. The entire Historical Atlas by William R. Shepherd, 1911, is online.

<http://www.davidrumsey.com/> David Ramsey Map Collection

Lots of choices; I searched for Ohio and found a great map of my area of research. I could save it or order a copy.

Addendum to the Vital Records Presentation

At the January meeting I showed a few examples of vital records with misinformation and how that misinformation made it difficult to locate the correct family line. I also stated that not all information on a vital record can be changed by family members, such as birth and death dates, and causes of death. But any misspellings, for instance, can be changed through the amendment process. If you have a California vital record (birth, death, marriage) that you would like amended, you may request a packet from the Napa County Clerk-Recorder's office that will give you the form and the information necessary to submit the amendment. The State Office of Vital Records will send the amendment to the California county in which the original certificate is located and will be made a part of that record. Other states undoubtedly have a similar process.

As for original birth certificates for adoptees, California is a closed state and does not allow, except by good cause before a judge, the original birth certificate to be unsealed. The new birth certificate contains information that to an adoptee is "fake." In my case, my original birth certificate contains many errors, such as my mother's "married" name and "maiden" name. I suppose I can rely on my birth date and time of birth (Pisces rising). So, what I have is a legal document, and not one that reflects on truth at birth and after adoption.

Government offices now "talk" to each other. Everyone should have a certified copy (on Bank Note Paper) of their vital records and also ensure that the information for all parties is correct.

My Summer Vacation in Italy

By Sharon Marangoni

I spent three weeks in Italy this past summer, from June 24-July 18. I was there for an immersion school in a little town called Urbania. Urbania is located in the central eastern portion of Italy in a region called Le Marche. It is a beautiful area with rolling hills and vineyards, not unlike the Napa and Sonoma Valleys. All one has to do is compare the countryside in both our area and Italy to understand why so many Italians came here in the late 19th and early 20th centuries!

The main purpose for my visit was to learn Italian. I have taken many classes over the years and, while I am by no means fluent, I can get around Italy fairly easily. It was fun to be with people who spoke little or no English and who helped me better my speech.

As it turns out, my husband Jim's cousins live in a town called Pesaro which is also in Le Marche. Pesaro is a little resort town on the shore of the Adriatic Sea. I had a free weekend from school so I took the bus for 1 hour and 15 minutes from Urbania to Pesaro to meet with "i cugini"--"the cousins". I stayed with Filippo, his son Luca, his brother Marzio and their mother Karin.

Since I had so little information on Jim's family, I wanted to get all I could from his cousins. Even though it was 106 degrees (with 100% humidity) they graciously took me to the Cimitero Centrale di Pesaro where the family is buried. They showed me where Jim's great uncle Ferruccio Marangoni and Ferruccio's mother Annunziata Olivieri are entombed along with Ferruccio's son Marzio, who died at 4 years of age during an allied bombing raid in WWII. The great thing about finding Ferruccio is that he is Jim's grandfather Guerrino's brother! This means that Annunziata is Jim's great grandmother, and Olivieri is her maiden name. I had been at this cemetery the year before and had seen Jim's grandparents' tomb, but his cousins had never seen it. I took them to the tomb of Adelaide and Guerrino Marangoni and I was able to give the cousins some information about Jim's grandparents that THEY didn't know. It was great to add a little more information on Jim's side of the family to my research.

One nice thing about Italian genealogical research is that the women tend not to take the husband's last name. That makes it much easier to find them in records. What makes research a little tougher is that one must go to the records office in the region where the event occurred to get records. That means that you must know where the event took place!

We are going to go back to Italy next year to visit the cousins. I hope by that time to have a little more information (and a lot more time!) so that I can go to the local records offices to get birth, death, and marriage documents for Jim's grandparents and other relatives.

Italy is beautiful and the people are wonderful. I would suggest if you are going there to travel in late spring or mid to late autumn as summer gets very hot. The winters are similar to ours here in the Bay Area, so if you don't mind getting rained on winter is not a bad time either. Transportation is easy too. Trains and buses run almost everywhere, and if you have a well defined plan about where you are going to be doing research, it is easy to design a travel plan that can encompass the sites you want to see along with the records you intend to seek.

Citing Sources

Citing Sources is one of the most important things you can do in your genealogy researching, because when you or someone else should need to look it up they will know where to go.

A brief word about Membership Dues:

It was becoming more confusing to keep members on the books for up to 3 months after dues had expired, so I am now sending out reminder notices at the beginning of the month after dues are due and unpaid. If you no longer wish to continue membership, please leave a voicemail at the library, return your late notice, or email me at karenb@napanet.net. And thank you for your cooperation.

Our Yearly Dues Supports Our Library. You are Appreciated!

Membership Report

I am now posting a copy of the Membership Report in the library's hallway. Please check it occasionally to see if you or a friend has been dropped from membership unintentionally.

Dues for March

Dues for April

Deloris Barclay, Lenora Gemmell, Denise Jackson, Skip & Jean Keyser, Bernie Mason, and Thomas Price.

Family History Library Salt Lake City, Utah

Do you know that there is a Christmas Tour of the Family History Library in SLC? It is sponsored by Leland and Patty Meitzler. It is held the first full week in December. The weather and associated travel can be a little iffy, but it's worth it. There are classes you can take and there are professional genealogists to help you. Temple Square is brilliantly lit with Christmas lights and there is music everywhere you go. Now in it's 27th year the tour is renowned for the genealogy research success of its attendees, many who come back year after year.

For information on this tour go to: <http://sites.google.com/site/saltlakechristmastour//>

NVGBS OPEN HOUSE

May 19, 2011 Open House, Napa Valley Genealogy Society will have an open house at their library. This will be an afternoon event, 1pm to 4pm.

1701 Menlo Ave. Napa, CA

Genealogy Resources

- ◆ Family Tree Connection—Offering subscriptions for as little as $2.50 a month, Family Tree Connection offers its own special blend of highly specific databases. These include school records, church memberships, employment and tax records, and even old telephone directories!
- ◆ AfriGeneas: African Ancestored Genealogy—Devoted to African-American genealogy, Afrigeneas offers interactive chats with other members in addition to its vast array of searchable records. The specialty of the records is finding the last slaveholder and first African in every family, offering an amazing link to the past.
- ◆ Documenting the American South Homepage—Sponsored by the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, this site features uniquely southern perspectives on history and culture in America. Offering text, images, and other material, this site is invaluable for students, teachers, and genealogy researchers alike.
- ◆ Lowcountry Africana—This specific site is dedicated to documenting families and heritages of African-Americans in “the historic rice-growing areas of South Carolina, Georgia and . . . northeastern Florida.” This site offers a valuable mixture of informative articles, key websites, and research materials.
- ◆ Afro-Louisiana History and Genealogy—Run by Dr. Gwendolyn Hall (professor emerita of history at Rutgers University), this site features a search engine derived from her own extensive research. Tracing the genealogy of African-Americans in the Louisiana area from 1699-1860, this site is amazing for scholars and genealogical researchers alike.
- ◆ American Battle Monuments Commission—This government-run site has a very specific purpose: letting you research information about soldiers interred overseas. Offering a wealth of information, this site specializes in overseas-interred soldiers from World Wars I and II as well as the Korean War.
- ◆ Civil War: Soldiers and Sailors System—Another government-run site, this page focuses on quick searches for simple information regarding sources on both sides of the Civil War. In addition to specific searches, the site features specific soldiers, sailors, regiments, battles, and more.
- ◆ American Civil War—The focus of this site is community interaction. It features interactive battle maps, forum discussions, insightful polls and links to the most recent Civil War information.

USGenweb site with a US map. Click on the State you wish to search and check out the amazing maps. Since it is a volunteer site, expect some sites "Under Construction" or looking for a volunteer to get it up and running. I found a very nice Ohio "Between the Mi-amis" map.

<http://nationalmap.gov/ustopo/index.html>

This the the USGS site for the Topo maps of the United States. You can download free and manipulate the maps. This is an ongoing site so not every state is completed.

<http://www.sos.mo.gov/mdh/browse.asp?id=12>

The State of Missouri has kindly digitized many of their heritage collections, including Missouri Plat books by W.W. Hixson & Co. These diagram the property and list the property owners. You can choose the county of your choice, FREE!

"Google" plat maps and see what you find for your area of research. Be specific, ie: plat map ohio. You can always narrow (by adding search terms) or expand (by deleting terms) to change your search.

See what turns up!

Happy hunting! Janice
